

Electronic devices coupled together via a communications network having date and time functions which are synchronized using an arbitration scheme so that any device in the network may have its date and time set after the clock on any respective electronic device has been set.

Electronic devices coupled together via a communications network having date and time functions which are synchronized using an arbitration scheme so that any device in the network may have its date and time set after the clock on any respective electronic device has been set.